Maggie Green

Vocalist

PROFILE: Maggie Green was born in the small town of Celina, Ohio and grew up in Michigan's Upper Peninsula. Her first instrument was piano, and throughout high school she performed and competed in both classical piano and voice. But soon she discovered jazz and loved the more informal style of expression and the deep rhythms and grooves. Maggie graduated from Boston's Berklee College of Music and has been performing jazz and Brazilian repertoire ever since. Her latest CD was recorded in Rio de Janeiro.

QUESTION: Why did you pick the instrument you play?

ANSWER: The voice brings me closest to God.

Q: Do you remember your first professional gig?

A: My first professional gig was at Dick's Den here in Columbus in the university area. It is truly a special place, and I'm honored to have gotten my start there.

Q: What is your latest musical project?

A: Recently I recorded a CD in Rio. It was extremely challenging, but well worth it! The musicians I worked with are incredible, and I'm very proud of the results.

Q: What is the last good movie you've seen?

A: "La Vie en Rose" about the life of Edith Piaf. What an incredible story.
